

Mr. Tareque Nasser

Awarded St. Bernard Award for Special Merit (3rd Class)

Citation:

Mr. Tareque Nasser has distinguished himself in numerous areas as a gifted teaching professional since he joined the Department of Finance and Banking of Assumption University in 1994. His exceptional work ethics is demonstrated by the inordinate number of upper division finance courses he has been called upon to teach to University Finance majors. Three major upper division subject areas per semester are his norm. Many of these courses he had not previously studied, thus he was required to devote a great deal of time and effort in pre-class preparation. The fact that he could deliver these courses in a professional manner indicates confidence and his ability to self study and to work independently of direct supervision by his department chair.

Mr. Nasser's willingness to shoulder an unusual heavy teaching load and to tackle unexpected problems that arise was proved by the fact that he has been asked by his Department Chairperson to take over mid-stream various finance courses that have come about through faculty sickness or resignation.

As one of a number of additional duties, Mr. Nasser serves the Finance and Banking faculty as an advisor to students and as the major determiner of which students are allowed to select the Finance and Banking major as their own.

In sum, Mr. Tareque Nasser has surpassed all requirements expected of instructors at Assumption University and has fully demonstrated his selfless devotion to the teaching profession and is hereby awarded the St. Bernard Award for Special Merit (3rd Class).
