

Abstract

Nowadays, due to a rapid business expansion and strong competition, several companies need to keep pace with such growth. The role of information is very vital to today's business. It helps serve and facilitates in decision-making.

This project is developed to aid the processing of human resource information at Asia Credit Limited. The structured system analysis and design, altogether with application development are applied as a case study in developing of the personnel information system.