

ABSTRACT

This project is a sales and marketing information system of the copy machine organization. Just as knowledge of computers and computer programming have become a basic skill needed to survive in today's information-base society, so has the design of business system. Because the development and use of computer system are basic to all business functions in today's environment. Top management is beginning to see the computer-based MIS as a fiscal imperative, clearly a corporate goal. To compete effectively in a world market, executive now realize that they must take full advantage of their information resources. When the systems are fully implemented, all users will get timely and meaningful information. To serve their requirements which, finally, enhance them to better controlling, planning, evaluating and decision making. The system will use package software and some part have been modified to serve the users requirement the application generators, screen forms, generator, report generator are to build the application program.