

What I Think about Politics

By A. Thonnaya Anopas

Politics is power seeking
A nation's navigation
The fending off of a country's freedom
Sovereignty, integrity... heritage
From vicious intruders
Who are notoriously ambitious
To gain gigantic force
Build more popularity,
Military security...
Economic leadership
To strengthen superiority
And finally weaken the weak.

If politics is for the nation's defense
Politicians urgently need good governance
With their souls, mind... heart put together
So to their advocates they could return
The interests of the trust they owe them
Besides building a strong strategy
Needed to reach the zenith of their glorious goals.

On the other side of the game
People have to be aware of their ardent duty
To exercise their right of suffrage

Righteously, unselfishly... willingly
Otherwise, they will grieve
At losing their birthright
Of having a country to live
Freely, proudly ... peacefully.

Bio-data:

A. Thonnaya Anopas received her Master's Degree of Education in Curriculum and Instruction from Assumption University and before coming to teach here in 1992, she had 23 years of teaching experience in Thailand and the Phillipines.