

Assumption University

The First International University in Thailand

Thirty-Second

Commencement Exercises

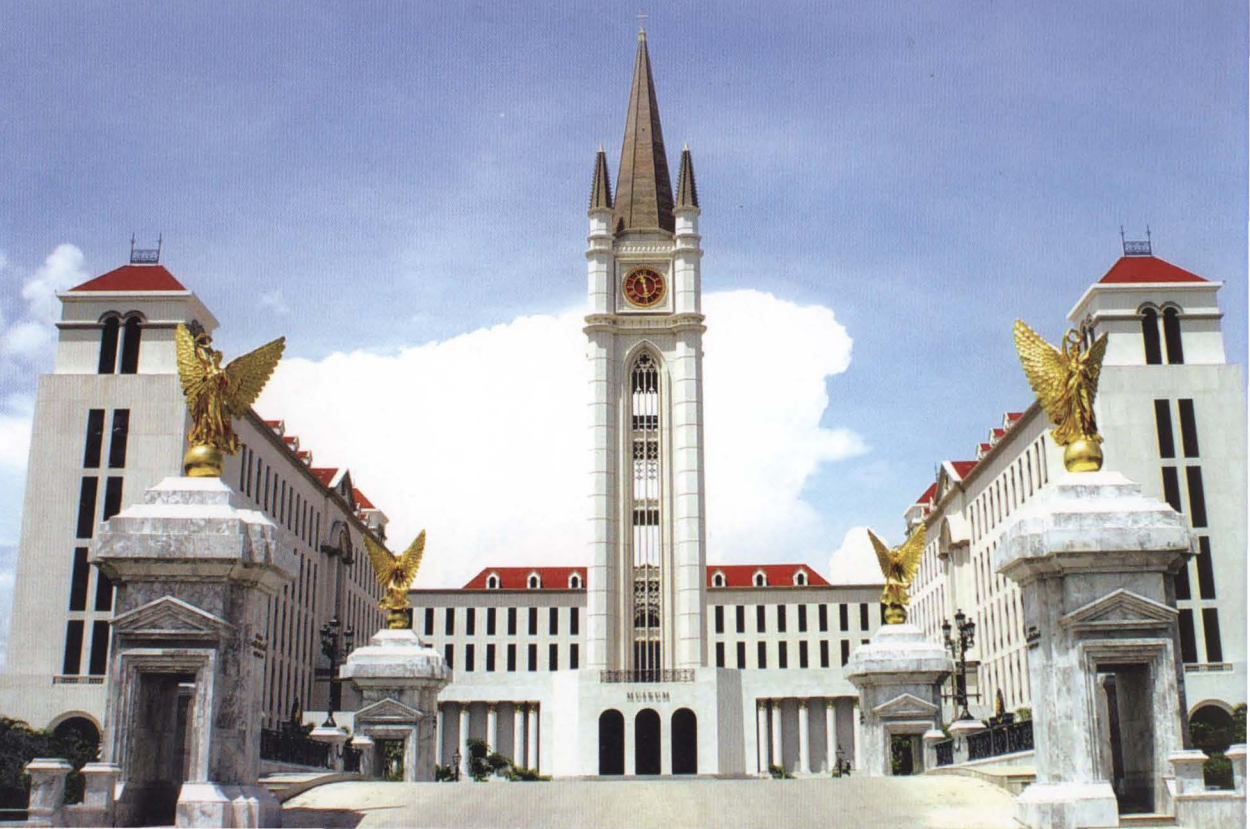

January 22, 2005

Assumption University was initially originated from Assumption Commercial College in 1969 as an autonomous higher education institution under the name of Assumption School of Business. In 1972, with the approval of the Ministry of Education, it was officially established as Assumption Business Administration College or ABAC. In May 1975, it was accredited by the Ministry of University Affairs. In 1990, it was granted new status as "Assumption University" by the Ministry of University Affairs.

The University is a non-profit institution administered by the Brothers of St. Gabriel, a worldwide Catholic religious order, founded in France in 1705 by St. Louis Marie De Montfort, devoted to education and philanthropic activities. The congregation has been operating many educational institutions in Thailand since 1901.

The University is an international community of scholars, enlivened by Christian inspiration, engaged in the pursuit of truth and knowledge, serving the human society, especially through the creative use of interdisciplinary approaches and cybertechnology.

Education

is the most effective means to liberate man

from ignorance and poverty

The fundamental aim of education is to develop and integrate man's physical,

intellectual, emotional faculties

to their fullest potential without extinguishing the creative spark in him, this integration processed through the proper exercise of personal freedom will ultimately lead to the formation of a complete man, bearing in mind man's existence is an unending process of completion and learning.

A man thus formed is capable of becoming responsible to himself and to the society in which he lives.

Philosophy

In loyalty to its Christian mission, ABAC stands for

- the inculcation of respect for the three institutions of the Nation: Religion, Country, and King; and a democratic way of life;
- the belief that a man justifies himself and his existence by the nobility of his work;
- the commitment to be a light that leads men towards the true source of all knowledge and life.

Objectives & Policies

ABAC exists for the main purpose of serving the nation by providing scientific and humanistic knowledge, particularly in the business education and management science through research and interdisciplinary approaches.

To this end it aims at forming intellectually competent graduates

- who are morally sound, committed to acting justly, and open to further growth in all this;
- who appreciate freedom of expression, imbibe right attitudes and ideologies through a carefully integrated curriculum of Ethics, Science, Languages and Business Management;
- who achieve academic excellence through hard work, analytical thinking, and effective decision-making.

Report on Academic Development Academic Year 2004

Brother President

Brother President Emeritus

Faculty members

Distinguished guests

Graduates

It is my honour to present to you the Report on Assumption University's Academic Development for Academic Year 2004.

Assumption University Academic Year 2004 is filled with developments and events, which involve the whole Au family from administrators, faculty members, staff members, students to alumni, parents and the society. These developments and events are proof of the University's efforts to maintain her leading position as an institution for knowledge.

The following is the summary report of these developments and events. It also includes the statistical data on the Graduates of Class 32.

1. Curriculum Development

For Academic Year 2004, 11 new programs were approved and offered. They are as follows:

- Doctor of Philosophy Program in Educational Leadership
- Master of Business Administration Program in Technology Management
- Master of Science Program in Management
- Master of Laws Program in Business Law
- Master of Arts Program in Business Law
- Master of Arts Program in Individual and Family Studies
- Master of Science Program in Information and Communication Technology
- Bachelor of Arts Program in Contemporary Music Performance
- Bachelor of Economics Program in Business Economics
- Bachelor of Arts Program in Contemporary Writing and Production
- Bachelor of Arts Program in Professional Music

At the same time, a total of 35 existing programs were modified.

The University also signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with KPN Music Academy for the curriculum development and management of 3 music programs.

2. Human Resource Development

The University recognizes the need to develop its human resource in terms of qualifications and skills to meet the demands of its stakeholders. For this, 5 new applicants for Master's and 11 new applicants for Ph.D. scholarships were approved. A total of 89 faculty and staff members are presently pursuing their studies: 10 members taking Graduate Diploma in Teacher Education, 35 members taking Master's programs, 33 members taking Ph.D. programs and 11 members in Joint programs. The Master's and Ph.D. programs are being taken in countries such as Thailand, Australia, USA, England and New Zealand.

For seminars, conferences and training programs, out of 447 faculty and staff participants, 49 attended these gatherings abroad and 398 nationally.

3. Research Support and Development

The Research Support Committee was set up to provide support and guidance to interested faculty members in their request for research funding.

In support for an academic's quest for new knowledge, a total of 11 researches were approved for funding, 2 of which have successfully completed and submitted their final reports.

4. International Alliances Development

In the year 2004, the University has signed 12 Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) with universities from 10 countries on such agreements as: student and faculty exchanges, twinning programs and general and research collaboration. These MOUs strengthen our international alliances with other universities and together with the existing MOUs resulted to more student and faculty exchanges, visits and collaborations among allied universities.

5. Major Events

Academic Year 2004 was highlighted with auspicious and memorable events. A list of these events is as follows:

- The 6th Cycle Birthday Celebration of Her Majesty the Queen
- Opening Ceremony of Srisakdi Charmonman IT Center
- Au Academic Competitions organized by all Undergraduate faculties
- The 50th Anniversary Celebration of Bro. Martin's Religious Consecration

Address by the President at Commencement Exercises on January 22, 2005
at Queen Sirikit National Convention Center (QSNCC)

THE NEED FOR INTEGRITY

Chairman of the University Council,
Distinguished Guests,
Dear Members of the AU Community,
Dear Graduates,

On behalf of all the members of our Assumption University Community as well as in my personal name, I would like to start off with congratulating all of you who have received a degree here today with a well earned success. I beg the rest of the audience to understand that I will primarily use this occasion to address our new graduates.

The ceremony of today marks an important milestone in your still very young life. For some of you it might be a major stepping-stone on his/her way towards a Master or a Doctorate. For many — if not most — it will mark the transition from student life to professional life. However, for all of you it should also be a day of reflection on what you exactly want and should do with the rest of your life. A moment of reflection therefore, not just on which profession you would like to exert or on which activities you are going to devote yourself, but even more importantly, on the moral values you are going to adhere to and that are going to guide you in your future actions and behavior.

Over the past years, I have used my commencement addresses to refocus the attention of our departing graduates on one or more of the specific moral issues that are bound to be of importance, both for themselves and for the society in which they are going to have to function. This address will be no exception and for today I have chosen to talk to you about the topic of INTEGRITY. It might be of some use that I first remind you what exactly one understands by “integrity”, or more accurately, what integrity can and should mean for you.

Integrity is derived from the Latin word “integras” and is related to such notions as integer, whole, untouched, entire. Like many words in our vocabulary, the word “integrity” can have a spectrum of (often related) meanings dependent on the context in which it is used.

There exists to begin with a quasi-technical meaning of the word “integrity” when it is used in the sense of “completeness” or “wholeness”. This is the sense it is used when a pilot speaks about a malfunctioning component as interfering with the “mechanical integrity” of his plane. It is also in that sense used by a Prime Minister or a President when he/she refers to the actions of a rebel group as threatening the “territorial integrity” of the country. In the remainder of this talk I will of course deal with “integrity” in a different sense, namely with integrity as a characteristic, a desirable property of human behavior.

However even when used in this “behavioral” sense, there exists subtle variations in the exact meaning of integrity. Most authors will agree however that integrity primarily refers to a consistency between words and deeds, to a behavior in which stated principles match actions, or more simply formulated: to an attitude of doing as you say and to saying what you do. Immediately to be added however is the condition that the “principles” and “words” referred in the above definitions cannot be arbitrarily chosen but should be based on ethical and moral values. Indeed, if consistency between words and deeds would be the only condition for the presence of integrity, one could argue that even the most wicked of persons and the most evil of dictators would have to be called a “person of integrity” just because he is acting in accordance with his pre-announced evil intents.

Some of the more debatable differences in the meaning of integrity turn around the question of which principles or moral values one requires for integrity. To some extent such principles and values will and can depend on education, religion, tradition, nationality, ethnicity, etc. However, there should clearly also be general values of honesty, respect, compassion, etc. that is, values that transcend social construction and specific culture. An ultimate common hallmark of real integrity is that it is an acted out commitment (in the face of adversity or temptation) to principled behavior at the cost to oneself. There could be a long-term profit to acting with integrity (and as we will later point out, there most usually is) but the primary effect should and will always be the foregoing of an immediate gain or the suffering of an immediate loss (see ref. 1). As such, behaving with integrity is a significant component of the larger topic of ethical behavior.

There are distinct types and different levels of integrity. There exists personal (or individual) integrity versus collective (or organizational) integrity, the integrity of a group as whole. One could also distinguish private level integrity, that is the integrity questions one faces as a friend, a partner, a husband/spouse or as a neighbor versus public integrity, the integrity problems one encounters as a student, a professional or as a citizen.

In the remainder of my talk I will want to pay attention to your past behavior as a student and to your future behavior as a professional, but let me first go into the question of “WHY do we need integrity?” Why is it important for our personal well being, as well as for the proper functioning of the society around us, that we behave with integrity and that our organizations and institutions operate with integrity?

Integrity is a key factor in all human relationships. Integrity creates trust and credibility. Integrity breeds accountability and honesty. As all of you know — and as many of its leaders publicly acknowledge — the Thai society is badly in need of the qualities that flow from integrity if it wants to turn the tide on the rampant corruption and cronyism that are nowadays besieging its proper functioning. For sure these problems are not limited to Thailand or to its South East Asian neighbors. We all read about the many financial and corporate scandals in the Western world, i.e. the Enrons, the Worldcoms, and many others. The sad fact however is that the limitations put on the development of our country and our region as a consequence of corruption are larger here than in any other part of the world and that there-fore — in relative terms — we are more hindered by the absence of trust, credibility, honesty, accountability than many other countries precisely because of this large — still to be developed — potential.

Maybe you are at this point asking yourself HOW we — at Assumption University — have taught you about integrity?

During your study at AU you have attended a lot of courses. Courses are part of the explicit tools that we have used to educate you. In this way we have presented you with courses on business, arts, sciences, languages, engineering, etc. all intended to prepare you for a future as a professional in these various vocational directions. The compulsory course on Ethics, initiated by our respected President Emeritus, Bro. Martin Prathip Komolmas, was an explicit effort to familiarize you “theoretically” with the many facets of ethical behavior and in particular with behaving with integrity.

However, more important than explicit courses should have been the implicit ways in which we have tried to teach you about integrity. When we asked you not to cheat at exams we were implicitly teaching you integrity. When we did not give you higher grades than justified by your results we were teaching you integrity. When we asked you not to transcribe texts from books or the Internet without proper footnoting, we were once more implicitly teaching you about integrity.

Integrity in an academic environment is a challenge at all levels. For many of the points that we require from our students, there are counterparts on the side of the lecturers and the university staff. Although it is not the purpose of my talk today to address these personnel categories, let me just mention that when we ask our lecturers not to perform privately-paid off-campus tutoring for students that are also participating in their on-campus courses, we are asking them to give you an example in integrity. When we require them to present you with representative and non-biased exam questions and make a fair evaluation of your answers, we are once more asking them to give you an example in integrity. And just in case that you are thinking I am not willing to look “closer at home”, yes there are also important integrity questions for us university officials and leaders. Within the framework of our awareness and conscientiousness about integrity, we university leaders have to continuously ask ourselves whether we are fair, consistent and transparent to our staff. Or whether we accept (or maintain) students purely on the basis of their merits or whether we let them enter (or stay) because their parents are wealthy or influential alumni. Thus integrity and ethics questions not only grow in number as one climbs on the social ladder, they also become more complex and more important in their consequences.

In dealing with an integrity problem one can generally recognize two distinct steps. The first one is the correct identification of what should be the right behavior and what would be the wrong one. The second step is to act in accordance with that insight. While it is true that a correct insight does not assure compliance, it is equally true that failing to recognize or define the integrity choice at hand frequently functions as an excuse or a pretext for not adopting the right behavior. This is most often the case when not acting with integrity consists of the relatively “easy” path of ignoring the facts or remaining passive.

In the examples I referred to earlier, the morally correct choice and the path to follow to behave with integrity will be quite clear and straightforward; you all know for instance that you should not cheat at exams. There are however often more difficult problems. Just think for instance about the question of what would or should be your behavior if you are witnessing cheating or stealing by another student? Or to make it more pregnant, when you are witnessing stealing or on-campus drug consumption by one of your close friends?

Likewise, after having entered professional life you will be faced with integrity questions that can vary from the straightforward to the extremely complicated. You will, for instance, have no trouble recognizing the correct (personal) integrity choice in the case you are confronted with embezzlement from an employer or the correct integrity attitude to be adopted (be it collective or personal) in the case of bribery, tax evasion, or fraud. The main problem here will not be the recognition of the integrity “barrier” but the decision not to cross it. However, in general, the integrity questions that you will be faced with on the professional level will be a lot more complex than those that you have encountered in your private or student life. Typical complicated business areas that are ‘mined’ with integrity transgressions and that nowadays overly and openly present in Thai society are (to just name a few) the problems of intellectual property rights, conflicts of interest and fair employment policies. Very often (and especially in the areas mentioned above) the first crucial step of properly recognizing the integrity choice or the integrity dilemma at hand is the most difficult step. There appear to be at least three factors contributing to this difficulty.

The first one is that business organizations are in the business of making money and need to make profit to survive. As a result, and even assuming the presence of sufficient integrity awareness, business organizations continuously have to balance their needs for profit with the needs of the society in which they are embedded. What is good for business might not be good for the environment or for employment (see for instance ref 2). This in turn implies that there is always an intrinsic tension between corporate integrity and the successful running and leading of a business.

A second major problem is that the morals and ethics of an organization are not just the “sum” of the personal ethics of its employees and managers. Although personal integrity forms a useful and important input factor, it is not enough to just only hire persons with “good” ethics to assure that an organization as a whole will function with integrity. One often observes that very decent persons become participants in collective non-ethical business activities that they would not engage in on an individual level. In the end, many organizations have an integrity-culture that is strongly conditioned by such factors as peer pressure, loyalty to the boss and not in the least by the internal personal rivalries and competitions (see again ref 2).

A third factor, not unrelated to the second one, is the frequently prevailing attitude that doing business is like entering into a game or a sporting match in which ordinary ethical and social rules no longer apply (see ref 3). Many of the people you will meet around you will appear to engage in their business work like contestants in boxing match, were indeed “kicking” the person in front is not only allowed but even required. “Winning” not only becomes an important goal it becomes the only goal. Warnings as to the presence of such a winning-at-all-cost mentality will be the using of arguments like “They all do it, why shouldn’t we?” Or “We must do it if we want to survive as a business.”

In the end, the main counterweight to corporate integrity derailments will have to be the promotion of appropriate integrity policies by the management, but properly developed personal integrities of the participating employees can give the required initial impulses.

At this point I should also mention that, in the beginning of your careers, the integrity questions you are going to be confronted with will most likely not be of the important (and mainly managerial) level referred to above. However apart from realizing that major integrity violations often hinge on the faithful and blind execution of orders by subordinates, it is important to underline that there also exist very simple and basic integrity attitudes which will greatly contribute to your integrity profile. Putting in the hours you are paid for, attending the meetings you have yourselves committed to, respecting deadlines, returning calls when you have promised to do so, caring for the responsibilities you have been assigned, etc. are all examples of simple “first” building blocks that will play an important role in establishing a solid professional integrity attitude and reputation. And this in turn will also give you leverage the day you have to take a stance on the integrity problems that come into play on the more organizational level.

As human beings we are all far from perfect. Even more important than being perfect or blemish free is to believe in “what should be” and the willingness to steer actions in that direction. Some of the integrity questions I have raised here today are very far-reaching and related to deeply entrenched societal habits. You cannot as a beginning young employee hope or aim for single-handedly changing a whole society and its habits overnight. But you can be aware of the appropriate integrity attitudes towards the challenges around you and by testifying to your values when able to do so, act as a beacon for a slow evolutionary process into the right direction.

One final point: Up till now I have been asking you to behave with integrity mainly from the viewpoint of its moral and ethical necessity. However the irony is that, from a long-term viewpoint, behaving with integrity will in most cases actually be beneficial and advantageous and thus — in the end — more than compensate for the immediate losses usually suffered as a result of it. Developing this statement would require another address, but let me just mention that a person which does not stick to his commitments will not “bloom” as a person and never be able to fully develop his/her potential. Any enterprise that compromises on the integrity of its products or its actions will — in the long run — be punished by either its shareholders or by the “market” forces. Here the famous quote ascribed to President Lincoln applies: “You can fool some people all the time, you can fool all the people some time, but you cannot fool all the people all the time.” In the long term, behaving with integrity becomes an integral part of the moral capital (and the so-called “goodwill”) of any business enterprise that is consistently adhering to it.

Dear Graduates!

I conclude with once more congratulating you and your family with the degree conferred upon you today and wishing you the moral strength to behave like persons of integrity in your further life. Our society is in urgent need of the corrective effects that will follow from pursuing that goal.

I wish you success and prosperity in all endeavors and may God bless you and your family always!

Dear Graduates,

As I was starting these few lines, the story of Ira Yates came to my mind... Ira Yates was running a successful but terribly boring business. He sold it just before the Great Depression (late 1920's), to get back to the only life he knew – ranching. He bought a thousand acres of land in West Texas and life quickly became neither boring nor profitable!

Yates and his family endured years of drought and economic hardships on the land. When it was rumored West Texas might be sitting on oil reserves, the struggling rancher finally had hope that his financial woes would be history... But that was not to be at least for the time being as oil companies were too busy with profitable oil fields... Two more years elapsed before a company agreed to construct a test-well on the Yates Ranch... Yates's land sat atop of one of the largest and richest oil fields in North America...

Aren't we all a little like Ira? Don't you already possess the well of your own success? Your gifts, talents, creativity - whatever you consider your own natural resources to be, are within you and just waiting to pour forth. The question is: will you tap into those resources or wait for someone else to tap and exploit them for you?⁽¹⁾

Dangers lurk out though. One of the most subtle, yet tragic, is to be caught by the system. If the last century has witness unprecedented progress, it has also created a milieu that ignores what is beyond, what is after... That system tends to ensnare humankind in the net of frenetic consummation. What matters is what man produces and fights for in its frenzy to conquer. Man has become unable to distance himself from things and get prevented from realizing that life is transitory and meant to lead towards the absolute Truth, God! The genuineness of man is achieved in as much as his whole person reaches the full Life.

That is my ardent wish for you all!

BENEDICTION

O God, the source of all truth, behold with your gracious favor our University and grant that knowledge and wisdom may be increased among us.

Bless all who teach and all who learn. May their minds be open to the truth.

Bless both teachers and students. May they ever look to you as their God, the source of all truth, and accept your teachings in genuine humility of heart.

Amen.
