

ABSTRACT

Due to the shortage of Medical Professionals in rural areas of many countries, telemedicine has become one of the important projects which help to improve the health care services in rural areas and remote sites.

This report was composed to study the telemedicine overview and telemedicine project in Thailand. Government support and the people perception about telemedicine benefits are the key factors in developing the successful telemedicine project in Thailand.

